Damages for a Preacher's Language.

The full bench of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts has sent an opinion in the case of Louis A. Morasse vs. the Rev. G. Ely and the Church, which was tried in Worcester County. The plaintiff is a physician in Southbridge and the defendant is pastor of the parish of Notre Dame in that town. The action was made out of tort and arose from language used by

HIS FAMOUS LETTERS TO HIS SON AND HOW THEY WERE WRITTEN.

[Written for the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.]

NEITHER PROTESTANT NOR CATHOLIC. That it is the duty to protect neither religion except in the sense that every man should be protected in thinking and worshipping as he chooses, provided he does not interfere with the same rights of his neighbors. Chesterfield is equally right in his reply. "First," says the impartial government in the course of time is the approval of all. Chesterfield came to be held in high regard by the Irish, even conceived an affection for the English, speaking of them in letters and upon abroad as "my countrymen." He would be tedious to set forth the facts with particularity; it will suffice to say that as a liberator, as a ruler of an ignorant and sur-

Chesterfield for his true portrayal of Irish bluntness should no longer keep these valuable letters from being read by all with who desire to cultivate the art of good-counsel. Johnson, himself, once said: "Out of the immorality and the book would be in the hands of the immorality and would be unpardonable to omit mention of either about between Johnson and Chesterfield. In one of his letters to his son, Chesterfield, doubtless with some exaggeration, describes Johnson's rude manners, and especially his ill-humors. He says, 'I am not sensible for me to love such a man?' No, the utmost I can do for him is to consider him a respectable Hottentot." When the Cuffs that are laundered at home often fall out of shape, because they are ironed out flat, and when the buttons are pulled the cuffs blouse and wrinkle. This can be avoided if the launderess dresses only knows how to iron the cuffs another way. They are padded, dry and then take the cuffs to the steam iron, and, pressing very hard on the edge, place it at one end of the cuff and slowly go over the length of the cuff. The cuffs will roll as the iron leaves it.

name was called a second time, Webster, a feeble voice answered "Here," The judge, who I have no doubt guessed what had taken place, did not look toward the jury-box and I did and I never saw such an extraordinary looking object as the butcher. His coat and waistcoat were torn from his back, his very shirt sleeves were tattered and his face and hands were covered with blood. The reason of this pretty well guessed what had happened. There had all along been a strong majority against the butcher, and the twelve men were now unanimous in returning a verdict of "Not guilty."
